RSH ARCHITECTS HIRES NEW INTERN AND SPONSORS PARTICIPATION IN SOLAR VILLAGE COMPETITION

June 3, 2002 – Pittsburgh, PA – Ruprecht Schroeder and Hoffman (RSH) Architects of Scott Township recently hired Lisa Yung as an architectural intern to assist the firm with computer drafting, design, and research.

Miss Yung will participate in the LEED (Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design) certification process and assist RSH in achieving its first silver certified LEED project.

RSH Architects is also sponsoring Miss Yung's involvement in the Solar Decathlon, a national design/build competition for colleges and universities. She devotes one day each week to her team at Carnegie Mellon University, striving to design and build the most effective solar-powered house for competition at the National Mall in Washington DC this fall.

Miss Yung will receive a Bachelor of Architecture from Carnegie Mellon in May, 2004. Prior to joining RSH, she spent two summers in New York City with internships at Alliance Consulting and then CD Design, Inc.

RSH Architects is comprised exclusively of registered and graduate architects, who utilize the latest innovations in design, planning, and technology to advance projects from concept to construction, providing customized services to a variety of clients throughout the region. Clients include advanced technology manufacturers, universities, corporations, and senior care facilities. For more information, call (412) 429-1555 or visit www.rsharc.com.
